Superme Court Reverses the Schmidt Case.

The supreme court to-day reversed the case of Charles Schmidt vs. The State. Schmidt was convicted in the court below for selling diseased meat. Judge Worden, rendering the opinion, holds that the statute under which Schmidt was convicted, intended only to interdict the killing of diseased animals for food, and no probibition was intended for the killing of diseased animals; that the legislature did not make the acts specified in said statute an offense, without any knowledge on the part of the person killing such animals or selling the meat of the character or bad quality of the animals or meat. The indictment is held bad because it charges the offense simply in the language of the statute. The indictment neither charges the purpose for which the meat was intended to be sold, nor any knowledge on the part of the defendant of its qualities. As the language of the statute only intended to include those as offenders who had knowldge, hence knowledge must be averred in the indictment. As the intention was only to prohibit sales for food, hence a sale or intended sale for food must be averred in such an indictment.

A Suit Historical in its Antiquity. A Suit Historical in its Antiquity.

The celebrated suit in chancery of Charles Goodwin, of Chicago, vs. Wm. E Niblack, individually and as administrator of the estate of Albert G. Slow, is now in inal hearing before Judge Gresham. Col. Slow died some years ago. Previous to his death he made an assignment in favor of Coodwin and others. Gredwin held a indedeath he made an assignment in favor of Goodwin and others. Goodwin held a judgment for $36,000, obtained in 1855. The deceased was a large contractor in the carrying of mails, and in 1876 the government appropriated $1,031,000 in settlement of the Slow claims for extra pay, and out of this sum the creditors were paid dollar for dollar on the principal, but no interest was allowed. Goodwin demanded interest, and the amount now involved is about $93,000. When Judge Harlan was first appointed to the supreme bench of the United States, he sustained a demurrer, and held that Goodwin could no recover from the estate. An appeal was t. THE WRETCH'S TRIAL

Davidge Begins the Argument for the Prosecution.

Guiteau Interrupts Him is the Usual

WASHINGTON, January 12.—As soon as the court was called to order Davidge took his position in front of the jury, and opened the argument with a disclaimer of any intention to make a set speech, but expressed a simple desire to render the jury what aid he could in their present and solemn duty. The time had now come in this trial when the jury were to become factors. Whatever disorder or levity might have characterized the trial, there was but one sentiment in respect of the conduct of the jury. All commenced their dignified deportment and close and patient attention to the evidence, and he could not doubt that, as they had received the commendation of all in the past they would continue to deserve it in the future by their decision of the question before them.

As Davidge traced the process of reasoning by which the prisoner gradually reached the conviction that "but one life interposed between himself and possibly great benefits," Guitean became restless and for the first time since the opening of court indicated by his nervous twisting about, the usual preliminaries to a series of interruptions, which in this instance quickly followed.

"Not often," said Davidge, "In the record of heinous crime do we have such plain and pointed evidence as to the first conception of crime. In this case the suggestion came to the wretch in the night as he was lying in his bed."

"It came when the Lord got ready to have it," said the prisoner.

Davidge continued: "This thought or suggestion came to him on the 18th of May. Still thinking that he might obtain office, he sought to keep his hands clean. He made another effort on the 28th of May to induce the president."

Guiteau called out from the dock: "I would not have taken a foreign mission after the 1st of June if it had been offered to me."

would not have taken a foreign mission after the lat of June if it had been offered to me."

Davidge (apparently not heeding him)—

To me."

Davidge (apparently not heeding him)—
"On the 28th of May —."
Guitean—"I am talking about the 1st of June."

Davidge (pausing a moment)—"Just listen to him."

Guiteau (sneeringly)—"They would listen to you, but your talk is so weak it is hardly worth listening to."

For several minutes Guiteau continued to interject his comments with the evident intention of annoying Davidge, but finding that he could not effect this, he gradually subsided into complete silence.

"In the beginning," said Davidge, "it was sought to show that the prisoner was off his balance; now the court tells you to look for that degree of insanity that disables a man from knowing that what he was doing was wrong. This is the test that you are to apply. Upon the question of inspiration I think I will be able to show to your satisfaction how little there is in this claim." The only question, he said, was that of insanity. He then argued that the prisoner had that degree of intelligence, the legal knowledge and moral sense which rendered him responsible for his acts. In a telling passage he showed that the prisoner himself had wit to see the fatal weakness of Scoville's line of defense and repudiated it, arguing in his own behalf that he was no imbecile but a sane man, whose intellect and will had been dominated during a specified period of time, rendering him irresponsible for this particular orime. He then reviewed the circumstances of the crime and the victim and the eriminal. His analysis of Guiteau's stances of the crime and the victim and the criminal. His analysis of Guiteau's character was graphic and effective.

"If," he excisimed, "I were to sum up he moral and intellectual qualities of the of a vulture, combined with the heart of a wolf."

In speaking of Guiteau's plan, he remarked upon his greater fear of a mob than of law, and exclaimed: "We must say to our shame that this estimate had a foundation. It rested," he added, "with this jury to show to the world whether Guiteau's opinion was well founded,"

Gath on Guiteau.

[Enquirer special.]

I will now give my own latest view of Guiteau, derived from to-day's observation: He is an uncontrite, insensible, common-place man, as sane as any egotist in the country. In the jail his high pitched voice and excited manner, and even his restless sparkle of the eyes, are no longer noticed; and he has the quiet persuasive voice and natural smile of any fellow you might see in the plainer walks of life—as at your butcher's or grocer's. Being now shaven, you have the whole of his face to inspect; and it has been exaggerated both in Mills's bust and in the illustrated papers. His jaw and chin are there made too prominent, and give him the suggestion of a prize-fighter. His chin is rather small, though on a flattish model. His face has its most brutal expression in the upper parts—as the square, thick nose and cheek breadth, and bold, shifting eyes, self-loving and somewhat glassy. No inner excitement lights up his face unduly. It seems brutalized by exposure, extremity and false relations to things, hike a theff's who was always pilfering and never got any plunder. His skin is not clear, but blotched, and has red places on the forehead. The lines of the countenance, whichever way you look at it, are brutal, and the repose which follows perseverance and content has long field his face, leaving the semblance of a sneak-thief who will roar if pursued and coaught.

Lobserved that this hand, as he closed it Gath on Guiteau.

fied his face, leaving the semblance of a sneak-thief who will roar if pursued and caught.

I observed that this hand, as he closed it in mine, was th'ok, clumsy and broad, and of a moist feeling. He was dressed in an old suit of black trousers, shirt, jacket and red fiannel undershirt, for which he apologized, saying he had his bad clothes to write his speech in. He is slim, wiry and muscular, though small in the body and legs, weighing 145 pounds. All the pictures of him exaggerate his hideousness. The restless eyes at once would make you think of him a second time if you spent an hour alone with him in a room not knowing what he was. Yet in the court room, seated among many hundred persons, Guiteau's way of taking things humorously does give him an exaggerated appearance; and this is why several people leave the court saying he must be crazy. His temperament must be sanguine, and his whole attention is given irritably to the trial. The court's indulgence has had a tendency to excite rather than compose his nerves and eyes. I recalled the trial of Judge George Barnard, whose vanity and unrestrained power while on the bench in Tweed's time made him, while under articles of impeachment, scowl, flash his eyes, and even threaten the witnesses, lawyers and high court.

PHILADRIPHIA, January 12.—In response to a call insued by the chairman, J. S. McKee, of the Independent republican state central committee, about 200 delegates, representing almost every county in Pennayavania met in the assembly hall this morning for the purpose of discussing the advisability of placing an independent republican ficket in the field for state officers and to Lormulate some definite action to be pursued by independent republicans. Among the prominent persons in attendance were Charles S. Wolf, independent republican leader, Philip R. Garrett, chairman of the committee of one hundred and many other members of that organization. John J. Pinkerton, of Chester, was chosen permanent chairman. Upon taking the chair lift. Pinkerton spoke of the arregant conduct of the men who had taken to themselves the leadership of the republican perty in Pennsylvania, which, he said, gave rise to the independent movement. THE national board of health is of the opinion that small-pox is imported by imnigrants. If this be true—and it seems likely-a remedy is at hand. It is scare ly probable that they would start on their long voyage infected, but rather that the close, unventilated and generally filthy steerage quarters of ocean steamers nurse and propagate this scourge. More whole some food, cleaner bedding and a more generous supply of water would do much ward eradicating the danger from this source. But where as many as a thousand people are crowded into the close quarters of the steerage, and given little or ne water beside that used for drinking purposes, it is no marvel that disease develops. The place allotted to immigrants by steamboat companies is little less than a hotbed of disease, and any noisome disorder lurking in the system is then speedily developed. The most crowded tenement houses in New York are open and airy compared with the steerage of most ocean A bill has been introduced in the lower house of congress by an Indiana member providing for the payment of the Morgan raid claims in this state, whether supported by vouchers or not. To be accurate, there are two bills, one for the payment of claims made by the seizure of property by the national forces in pursuit of Morgan, without vouchers, under regulations which the secretary of the treasury may establish; the ether for the payment of losses filed with the quarter master-general of this state, upon the allowance of the commission appointed by the governor, with the proofs presented to the commission. These Morgan raid claims were made a regular persecution of each general assembly from '65 till they were kicked out of the state house. There are few, probably, that are not out of the hands of the original claimants and held by speculators, and there are many that were extended beyond a fair demand. The members from the middle aud north of the state would not consent to paying them, and the claims never had much of a show for allowance, except by a "dicker" between their friends and the friends of another extended claim. The combination "you vote for mine and I will for yours," once came close enough to going through to create a little disturbance, but it missed.

CUBRENT COMMENT. The coming "horse man" is Commodore N. W. Kittson, of St. Paul, who derived his title from running steamboats on the Red river of the north, and who made an immense fortune out of the Manitoba road, the old St. Paul and Pacific. He is investing largely of his wealth in fast horses having paid as high as $13,000 for a single animal. He has a breeding farm near St. Paul, which, with the stock, cost him $200,000. He has now bought "Erdenheim," the noted breeding farm of Aristides Welch, adjoining Philadelphia, at a cost of $100,060. Flora Temple and Leamington lived and died there, and Parole and Iro quois were raised there. Mr. Welch sold for personal reasons, and the sale was a great surprise to horse men, as he had asked $150,000 for the place.

BODY SNATCHING.

The Recent Grave Robbery in Scotland—
A Repetition of the Stewart Theft.
[London Correspondence Chicago Times.]
One of those sensational outrages which shock even more than crimes of greater magnitude, has just taken place in Scotland. The family vault which contained the body of the late Lord Crawford and Balcarres was last week broken into by sacrilegious hands, and the earl's remains stoles. The late earl was, in many ways, a remarkable man. His title was one of the oldest in the kingdom, he himself being twenty-fourth earl of Crawford and ninth earl of Balcarres. He was a man of great wealth, which was derived in part from wenty-balences. He was a man of great wealth, which was derived in part from soal pits, and was, merover, a scholar and in author. He devoted much time to instronomy, and in 1874, at his own an author. He devoted much time to astronomy, and in 1874, at his own expense, equipped an expedition to to proceed to the Mauritius and there observe the transit of Venus. He died at Florence Dec. 13 of last year, and his body was conveyed to England after having been previously embalmed by an Italian skilled in the art. The Scotch of the northern Highlands are and always have been eminently superstitious, and ever since the theft of the body they have been recalling to mind a number of circumstances and coincidences which marked the funeral. Thus, all through the long journey from Florence over the Alps into France, and thence across the channel to England and Scotland, the elements, it would seem, left little repose to the earl's remains. The coffu itself was nearly washed overboard in a gale of wind, while at Aberdeen so fierce was the storm that his hearse was smowed up for days and could neither advance nor return. Dunecht house, the present residence of the family and the scene of the robbery, stands some distance from the main road to Aberdeen, in a secluded position, surrounded by trees. It is about a mile from a place known as Skene house, the residence many [generations ago of a "Warlock laird" of that ilk, whose evil deeds still live in the folk-lore of the country. Adjoining the Dunecht house and indeed forming a portion of it, as not undeeds still live in the folk-lore of the country. Adjoining the Dunecht house and indeed forming a portion of it, as not uncommon in English country houses, is a private chapel, and in this a private mausoleum. Here the body of the late earl had been laid. The mausoleum itself was built of massive granite blocks, and the approach to it was by a short flight of stairs, which was covered over by heavy slabs of the same kind of stone. Each of these also weighed at least half a ton, and was which was covered over by heavy slabs of the same kind of stone. Each of these alabs weighed at least half a ton, and was moreover covered to a considerable depth with earth. A laborer passing the spot on his way to work observed that the earth covering the slabs had been disturbed, and that one of them was standing on its end, supported by a stick. In a moment the truth dawned on him, and no time was lose in instituting a search.

A horrid sight met the view of those A horrid sight met the view of those who first entered the vault. Strewed upon the ground were pieces of wood and the chemically prepared sawdust in which the deceased had been laid in Italy. The three coffins which had inclosed theremains were lying upon the ground in a state of wreck.

The lid of the outer coffin the robbers had The lid of the outer coffin the robbers had unscrewed, but the two others, including the leaden one, they had simply pried open at the lower end. Through the opening so made they had evidently dragged the body of the late earl feet foremost, and had then departed with it. The silver mounting and other ornaments were left untouched, from which it is surmised that the main object of the robbers was to obtain a ranfrom which it is surmised that the main object of the robbers was to obtain a ransom for the body. Since the theft has been discovered every means of detection has so far been tried to no purpose. An idea is prevalent in some quarters that the body has not been taken to any great distance, and consequently a most minute search is being made in the house itself and throughout the grounds. For the latter, purpose blood hounds are being employed, a use to which these fierce prutes have not probably been put in Scot. bring employed, a use to which these herce brutes have not probably been put in Scot-land since the days of Claverhouse and the Covenanters. It is probable that no ran-som will be offered for the body itself, though I understand that the police authough I understand that the police authorities at Scotland yard are not quite of the same way of thinking. It is said that the decision of this question will be left to the late earl's wife, who is at present in Italy. Public opinion, however, is strongly against offering any considerable reward, as it is held that such a course would be a simple premium on similar robberies in future. Every noble family in England has its private chapel, with a family vault attached, and let it only become known that such receptacles could be plundered with a good chance of a subsequent reward, and not one in a hundred of them would be safe, for English country houses are inhabited, as a rule, only during six months of the year. The rest of the time they are left in the care of upper servants, or farm bailiffs. In Scotch law it would appear, curiously enough, that stealing a or farm balliffs. in Scotch law it would appear, curiously enough, that stealing a corpse is not a felony, but only a misdemeanor. This was a very important distinction two generations ago, when stealing five shillings was a capital offense. It is, however, a felony to take along with the body any ornaments, grave clothes, or objects buried with the deceased, for such body any ornaments, grave clothes, or objects buried with the deceased, for such things are the property of the executors. If, therefore, those who carried off Lord Crawford's body can show they took only the corpse, without anything else appertaining to it, they will probably, even if convicted, be able to escape with a merely nominal punishment. During the first half of this century Scotland was preminently the country of body stealing and "resurrecting." Previous to the passage of the anatomy act, the schools of Edinburgh used to be supplied with anatomical subjects either by the enterprise of the students or, more generally, by that of a body of men who devoted themselves for payment to the ghostly work of church yard desecration. Two of this fraternity, Burke and Hare, have left names distinguished above most others in the gloomy annals of crime. It was the practice of these men to decoy their victims into lonely places and suddenly clap a pitch plaster over their faces. Death occurred, of course, very quickly from suffocation and left no traces behind. It is supposed that this fearful traffic in murder had continued for many years, until at last Burke, who seems to have been the stronger and hardier villian of the two, was overpowered by one of his would-be victims, and in this way his long career of crime was unfolded. As it is, his name added a verb to the English language—namely, "to Burke," just as the troubles in Ireland have enriched the mother tongue with the word to "Boycott."

Gath on Holman. [Enquirer Washington special.] Observe that small man with a gray goatee, rather low forehead, and somewhat pinched face—as if the cheek-bones and the eyes were always counseling together. It is Holman, of Indiana, a native Hoosier, now nearly sixty years old, who has spent a good while on the bench, and has been nine times elected to congress. His chief nine times elected to congress. His chief province here is to object. It struck him some years ago that economy was a great card, if you played it fine enough, and he made up his mind to stop the operations of a wanton government. To do this, of course, offended many people who thought the government ought to be wanton if it was going to go around. The idea of a government sitting up like a Prudence—or like Maria Theress, the empress, with only one husband and plenty of generals, instead of imitating the Empress Catharine, with a husband in every general—is irritating to the average human nature. Holman was voted a bore. When he would come back the moment he entered the door he cried out, "I object!" Democrats as well as republicans kept an eye on a man so disinterested in his objections, and thought Uncle Sam could never be ruined. So Holman is no nearer the presidency of the United States than when he started, and he seems to have reserved his objections for large occasions—for instance, when we have a financial panic, when he will rise and say, "Didn't I tell you so?" province here is to object. It struck his Congress Yesterday. After the discussion of the Sherman funding bill in the senate the president pro tem. announced the special committee on the rights of women, as follows: Messrs. Lapham, Anthony, Terry. Blair, George, Jackson and Fair.

Mr. Anthony introduced a bill providing for the retirement of any person who has served fifty years or upwards in either house of congress.

In the house Mr. Orth's motion to refer his resolution to the committee on civil service reform was defeated—yeas, 58; nays, 135, and it went to the committee on reference on the committee on the committee on the committee on the service reform was defeated—yeas, 58; nays, 135, and it went to the committee on the service reference on the service of the service of

Mr. Haskell introduced as a privileged question a resolution that no person main-taining polygamous marital relations is en-titled to admission to the house as delegate from any territory. The house decided that no question of privilege was inwoived.

Mr. Burroughs asked leave to introduce and put on its passage a bill defining the qualifications of territorial delegates. It provides that no person under the age of twenty-five and seven years a citizen of the United States, and no person living in big-amy or polygamy shall be eligible. Objec-tion being made, Mr. Burrows gave notice that he would introduce the bill again on

The Trade Dollar.

Mr. Burchard, director of the mint, refer ring to the proposition to recoin the trade dollar, says that the bill ought to pass, as the trade dollars are a great inconvenience, and the experiment of coining them has and the experiment of coining them has proved to be an entire failure, and was a great economic blunder. He does not think that there are more than $7,000,000 in circulation in the United States, and says that there are practically none in China. The argument made in the last Congress against recoining of the trade dollar, on the ground that the passage of such a bill would benefit speculators, who would import all the trade dollars now in circulation in China to this country, and make a profit of 10 per cent, is without foundation, as trade dollars no longer exist in China, they having long ago found their way to the melting pot. The Chinamen discovered immediately after the trade dollars were comed that they could make ten grains to the dollar, or ten dollars to the thousand by remelting, and used the Mexican dollar instead. This was done, and, inasmuch as the commercial value of the trade dollar in this country is now about 99% per cent. on this country is now about 99% per cent. on the dollar, there could be no profit here.

Col. Arabi Bey, the leader of the Egyptian army, is a tall, stern-faced, athletic man. City Health Regulations. The city board of health yesterday after-tion issued the following order:

The city board of health yesterday afternoon issued the following order:

It is also hereby ordered that no person shall ship or bring into this city any rags, second hand clothing, bedding, or carpets from any locality infected with small-pox, under a penalty of not less than $25.

We desire to call attention to the fact that successful vaccination implies the removal of the susceptibility of small-pox. This can only be insured when the vaccination has been recently performed with pure, reliable virus. Humanized virus is uncertain, often impure, and should never be used. The physician or person using it not only lays himself liable to a fine, but to a suit for civil damages.

We request every person who has not been vaccinated recently to have it done, as the only safety is in revaccination. We especially request that all railroad employee be stone vaccinated; also, all persons employed in and around public houses, stores, machine shops, depoits, street cars, packing houses, all policemen, telegraph operators, postal c'erks, prisoners in the jail and station house, and any and all others who are brought in contact with the public.

Again we say that no person is secure until repeated vaccination fails to effect them.

BAILWAYS-DAMAGES Hoagiand et al. Porter C. C. Affirmed. Howk, J.
The facts found specially by the jury, and on which the judgment in this case was founded, were briefly; that Hattle E. Hoagiand, wife of the co-appellee. William, took passage on appellant's railway from Chicago to Plymouth, Ind.; that some time before she arrived at the latter station the conductor in charge of the train took up her ticket, when she saked him if the next station was Flymouth, your stopping place." The train, however, was stopped by signal at Grovertown, a station some distance from Plymouth, where the said Hattle got off, under the impression that it was the proper station; that she wandered about in the dark and cold and suffered pain, etc. The jury on these facts assessed her damages at 800. If the law was with her, otherwise for the railway company. This judgment was correct. The passenger was in the discharge of the appellant's agents and had a right to rely on their statements, without being chargeable with contributory negligence.

TILEOFTIMATE CHILD—INHERITANCE. 7464. Franklin L. Borroughs, vs. El dams, et al. Randolph C. C. Affirn ranklin C. Adams, et al. Randolph C. C. Affirmed. Franklin, C.
Under the statute of February 10, 1853, (18 Misch provides that an illegitimate child under certain contingencies may inherit the land of its putative father, it was intended by the legislature that should the remote contingency cour, that there was no legitimate child confidere in the United States, then the estate should go to the illegitimate child in preference to its "escheasing to the estate. It was not the legislature intent nor will the language of the statute bear the construction that the brothers and sisters of a decedent were to be cut off and the estate given to an illegitimate child.

NOTES—PAYMENT—MORTGAGES.

$582. Tolbert E. Weston et al. va. Spencer Wiley. Franklin C. C. Reversed. Bicknell, C. This was an action on a note and to forcelose a mortgage. There had been a transfer of the notes and theappellant took up the old notes severed by mortgage and executed a new note equal in amount. The suit was on the new note was executed in full payment of the old ones. The court erroneously rejected this testimony. If the notes mentioned in the mortgage were fully paid, there could be no forcelosure. There can be payment of one note by another note, the same as payment in money or otherwise, if such note is accepted as payment, if the note given in payment te negotiable according to the law merchant, the presumption is that it was received as a payment; if it is not negotiable, the presumption then is that it was not received as a payment, but in such case evidence may be introduced to show that in fact it was received as a payment (88 Ind., 7%).

CHATTEL MORTGAGE—PLEADING—PRACTICE.

8585. Joseph H. Bradley vs. Wm. Patterson Hendricks C. C. Affirmed. Bicknell, C.

The appellee alleged in his complaint that he paid a certain sum of money for the appellant and signed a note for him as surety; that the appellant falled to pay the note and appellee was compelled to pay the same; that appellant agreed in consideration of these payments to execute a chattle mortgage on certain furniture, but refused to do so; the complaint embraced several causes of action; for the money paid; a claim in replevin; a demand that the court would decree specific performance of the agreement to give the mortgage, and finally a demand for a foreclosure of the mortgage which the appellant had agreed to make. On the complaint a writ of replevin was issued, and the sheriff took the property; there was a trial and judgment for the amount; that the appellee was entitled to the possession, and to the foreclosure of the promised mortgage that had never been exceuted. Error was assigned on the overruling of the demurrer to the complaint. The complaint contained one good cause of action; for the money paid therefore there was no error in overruling the demurrer to the entire complaint, (72 Ind., 5.) There were several causes of action improperly united in the complaint, but error in rulling on a 4-murrer for that cause will not authorize the reversal of a judgment. (Practice act, sec. 52.) As to the motion in arrest, if the appellant was not statisfied with the form of the judgment his remedy was a motion to modify it. (7 Ind., 522.)

BASTARDY—NEW TRIAL.
8473. Henry C. Jones vs. The State, ex rel.
Hada Dillinger. Tipton C. C. Reversed. Frank-Hada Dillinger. Tipton C. C. Reversed. Franklin. C.

This was a bastardy suit instituted agaicst the appellant and he was adjudged the father of the child. The relatrix, in her examination before the justice of the peace, stated that the chi'd was begotten the last of December, 1878.
The evidence shows that the infant was born a fully developed child August 20, 1879. The appullant testified that he had never met the relatrix until the latter part of Eebruary. The appullant testified that ne had never met the relatrix until the latter part of Eebruary. The appullant testified that on the 3rd day of December, 1879, he discovered that he could prove by two winnesses, giving names and places of residence, that the relatrix had spent two weeks of the lisst of November, 1873, at a certain hotel, and that while there a man had shared her bed with her, and that she had to be sent away from the hotel for indecent conduct. The affidavits are a smifigent showing to entitle the appellant to a new trial.

EMPLOYMENT-PELLOW SERVANTS. 8170. Robert A. Q. Robertson vs. T., H. & I. Railroad Company, Vigo, C. C. Affirmed.

EMPLOYMENT—FELLOW SERVANTS.

8170. Robert A. Q Robertson vs. T., H. & I. Railroad Company, Vigo, C. C. Affirmed. Morris C.

The chief question presented in this case is as to whether the injured party, who was a brakeman, and the one that caused the injury, who was a train dispatcher, can be considered fellow-servants. The duties of the train dispatcher and the brakeman are quite distinct, but not more so than are the duties of the brakeman or the switch tender snd the brakeman. Safety in running trains requires the prompt and faithful discharge of the duties of all those employes. Their co-operative and combined labor relate to the same object. and are essential to the movement of trains on the road. The mere fact that the duties of some of the employes are performed on the train and those of others at a particular place upon the road, does not determine the question of this common employment. If the duties discharged by each relate to the same general object, they must be held to be fellow servants. It is enough if they are employed for the purpose of effecting the same general object. The brakeman and train dispatcher are therefore fellow servants. (Whar. on Neg., 230; 23 ltd., $1; 18 Ind., 226; 72 Ind., $1.)

ENFORCING CONTRACTS—DEMAND.

8189. John Rodenbarger vs. Mitchell Bramblet Clay C. C. Affirmed. Woods, J.

The complaint shows, in this case, that the appellee became surety for Noah Rodenbarger and or e Wit'y on a promissory note made by them to William Swain for the price of a horse sold them by Swain; that Witty sterwards sold his half interest in the horse to the appellant, who in consideration therefor, "agreed to and with Witty to assume and pay off said note to Swain;" that Swain indorsed the note to George W. Jacks who brought suit the near against the makers, and the appellee who was compelled to and did pay the whole amount of the note. This complaint states facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against the appellant must have increased the contract by the appellant must have increa

NOTES—ILLEGAL CONSIDERATION.
SSES. Joseph Ricketts va. Joel R. Harvey et al.
Madison C. C. Eversed. Best, C.
Where one execuses notes to the prosecuting witness in a criminal case, in pursuance of an agreement that the payees are to use their influence to secure the invorable termination of the criminal prosecution, this consideration is illegal and the agreement is against public policy. It is the duty of every person to exercise facts on which the judgment was based and which were found specially were briefly "that its 1835 the board of com missioners of Decature county laid out the highway obstructed by appellant and from that year until 1850 it was used as a public highway. In the spring of the year 1800, a gate was placed across it, and remained until 1878; that the road was used by the public after it e erection of the gate, as it had been before, and it was worked and controlled as a public highway. In June, 1859, a petition was presented to the county commissioners, and it was ord red t at the road be changed to a gateway. Apre lants contend that there was no public highway, because it does not appear that the board had jurisdiction to make the order. It was not necessary to inquire whether or not the board had jurisdiction. The public had acquired a r ght to the way by user for the rejuis is time, which is as effectual as a grant from the owner, or as adjudication by the board. The appel ants objection is not tenable, that the appellee having saw man express order of the board of commissioners, has no right to claim by pre orpout. The theory on which the dostrine of prescription rests is that there was an original right or express grant. Proving an attempt to make an express grant dees not weaken the presumption arising from lapse of time.

MARKET REPORT.

Regular lines of dry goods are ma prices with no indications of a change, but some jobs are opened in the way of old styles, and are being closed out at a price. In the egg mar-ket the tendency is still downward, and there is little or ne movement. Hides are still weak, following a decline east. Sugars are easier, buyers taking stock about as wanted for daily requirements, with prices shaded 1/2 cent. Caution is again sounded as mixed or new process sugars, that they are injurious, but they are lacking in sweetening power, and the cousumer shoulders this loss. Dealers who handle these sugars can undersell their neighbors, and if sold for what they really are no injustice is done. Coffees bring no better prices; there is an improved novement. Syrups are advancing steadily.

Mr. Storre's Lecture.

The attendance upon the lecture of Hon. Emery A. Storre, at English's opera-house last evening, under the auspices of the Geo. H. Thomas post, G. A. R., was not so large as it should have been. His theme was "Our Country." He was introduced by Col. James B. Black, and spoke about an hour. While his remarks were always interesting and worthy the ability of the distinguished speaker, they lacked somewhat the inspiriting effect that comes from a large assemblage of heserers. He said the country was never so prosperous, so united and so great as at the present time. The people new believed that the banner of the United States was greater than the banner of the states, and believed that the future of the nation depended upon the untrammeled right of each citizen to cast his ballot as he chose. In the last twenty years the United States had made a thousand years of as grand a history as had ever been recorded. He said:

It has liberated 4,000,000 slaves; it has restored a great nation and healed its wounds; and slaggering under aponderous debt, it has kept its credit bright and shining. Isn't it something to be proud of, and must we not do all in our power to prevent any stain on its record? We are citizens of this great country, and we have our duties as citizens, and the most important of these is a familiarity with our institutions. I never expect another great country, and we have our duties as citizens, and the most important of these is a familiarity with our institutions. Electric Light at the Depot. The electric light was used at the Union The electric light was used at the Union depot last evening for the first time, and hundreds of people wandered through the spacious interior of the building for several hours, admiring the unusual scene. There is also a jet on each end outside of the Union depot, lighting up the street below, and the one on the west end was aidlow, and the one on the west end was aided by a similar jet on the Spencer house balcony, both combined giving a brilliant illumination to the street. Eleven jets, each of 2,000 candle power, are located inside the building, and that so many are needed is explained by the soot-stained walls and the attic above, which prevents a good reflection of the light. The exhibition continued last night from early dusk until after eleven o'clock, and was satisfactory. Similar jets will soon be erected on the Union tracks, where the same are largely used after nightfall.

The Bowman Matter.

The Bowman Matter.

Edward R. Bowman, who was so dangerously beaten by Patrick Dwyre and Frank Sanders on the 31st of last mouth, to-day filed a complaint against those parties with a demand for $500 damages. The cases for assault with intent to kill, pending against Dwyre and Sanders, in the city court, were called this morning and dismissed, owing to the fact that the grand jury had passed upon the matter. Dwyre, however, was fined for assaulting Stephen Violet, the colored man who interfered to protect Bowman. Still later Sanders was arraigned in the criminal court and the evidence was submitted, on the strength of which Judge Heller found him guilty of assault and battery, and assessed a fine of $50 and costs. The case against Dwyre is still pending in the criminal court. the criminal court.

The Sunday Law.

About five weeks ago the case of the State vs. William Yohn was appealed to the supreme court. The object of the case was to test the constitutionality of the Sunday law. Spaan and Heiner, attorneys for Yohn, wrote a brief and filed the same; this was answered by the attorney goars! for Yohn, wrote a brief and filed the same; this was answered by the attorney general's brief, in which he admitted that the law in question was unconstitutional in part. The case was distributed and fell to the lot of Judge Elliott for decision. Since then he has intimated to the attorney general that the state had better furnish an additional brief. This, Prosecutor Elam, is now engaged in doing and will probably have it fluished in two weeks. Yohn's counsel will then reply to this additional brief of the state and the case will no doubt be decided within a month.

Vaccination of School Children,

Vaccination of School Children.
To the Editor of The Indianapolis News:
Will you please inform us through your columns what regulations have been made in regard to vaccination. Different statements seem to have been made in the papers. We want to know especially what applies to country schools. Will those who have had the varialoid need to be vaccinated?

DANIEL MATHER.
MAYWOOD, IND. January 19, 1882.
The health officers of the county communicate their instructions to the teachers through the trustee of the township. School children must be vaccinated, in cases where notice has not yet been given, within 60 days from Jan. 1. The question of re-vaccination and of the liability of children who have had the varialoid to the disease, depends entirely upon the opinions of the child's physician, who will give the proper certificate.—[Ed. News.

There was a shocking incident last night in the family of Mr. Joseph Reifle, 15 Russell avenue, which nearly cost the lives of three persons, and may yet result fatally to one. Mr. Reifle and wife are aged people, the former seventy-six and the other two years his junior, and they occupy the upper rooms of the residence for sleeping purposes. Miss Louise Engel, a young girl, has a lounge close at hand, that she may be of service when needed. Reifle, jr., and family sleep down stairs. During the night Mrs. Reifle, jr., was aroused by a noise up stairs, and called her husband's attention thereto, but their suspicions were allayed by the quiet which followed, and Mr. Reifle dropped off to sleep again. His wife remained wakeful, and about two o'clock was alarmed by a moring sound which seemed to come from the upper rooms. She again aroused her husband, and both ran up the stairway to their parents' room. They were met by a suffocating smell of gas, and the sight which met their gaze threw Mrs. Reifle into a dead faint, from which she was with difficulty aroused. On the floor lay the unconscious forms of the sged people, appearances showing that one had fallen upon the other, and on the lounge rested the girl, also unconscious. Very fortunately, Dr. Calvin I. Fletcher chanced to be in easy call, and prompt remedial agencies were employed. Investigation showed that during the night the stove pipe had fallen, and the gas from the burning coal had escaped directly into the room, and had caused the terrible condition in which the three people were found. Mr. Reifle was the first to recover consciousness, but he has no recollection of what occured. Artificial respiration was resorted to on on the other two, and was kept up without intermission during the forenoon. This afternoon Miss. Engel was partially conscious, and there was no doubts of her complete recovery. Mrs. Reifle continued insensible, and being in feeble health, there is fear that the end will be fatal in her case:

The incorporation in Ohio of the Cincinnati & St. Louis Air Line—narrow guage—gives rise to the rumor that a scheme is on foot to form a consolidated system of narrow guage roads in the middle states. The above line will extend from St. Louis to Cincinnati, and from Cincinnati to a connection with the Connotton Valley road, whereby connection will also be formed with the Toledo, Delphos & Burlington, thus connecting in one system all the great railroad centers of the Mississippi valley.
